The first to mention are small size, lack of administrative support in the region, unclear accessibility to Transneft oil pipeline (railway/trucks), high costs of oil extraction by using submerge pumps and necessity to invest additional capex for development with questionable payback in the current circumstances with the pricing situation at the oil market.

As for an oil opportunity project in Russia, I am not sure. Once V said that he is tied of Russian oil and gas industry. Anyway, I'll ask him. Would appreciate if you could provide me with some more information: region of Russia; name of the company or its owners (might be crucial).

Kind regards,

Yakov
